Biographical/Historical Sketch

Anthony N. B. Garvan was born in New York State in 1917 and attended Yale University (B.A., M.A., Ph.D.). He came to the University of Pennsylvania in 1950 for a Fellowship in American Civilization and was appointed Assistant Professor of American Civilization in 1951 (the first such appointment in the United States). By 1960 he was Professor and the first chairman of the American Civilization department. Garvan was also the head of the graduate program in Historic Preservation from 1980-1982. Beyond the University of Pennsylvania, Garvan was lecturer at the Henry F. DuPont Winterthur Museum, 1953-1957; head curator at the Department of Civil History and at the Growth of the United States Exhibit Hall at the Smithsonian Institution, 1957-1960; and advisor to the National Portrait Gallery, 1961-1962. He was the president of the Board of Directors of the Library Company of Philadelphia at the time of his death in 1992.

Garvan's collection of materials related to American architecture focuses on Alexander Jackson Davis (1803-1892), one of the most important American architects of the nineteenth century. Davis was born in New York, and studied to become a painter. His skill as draftsman and renderer led to his partnership (1829-1835 and 1842-1843) with Ithiel Town. Davis was associated with many major designers of his period; particularly notable among these are Andrew Jackson Downing and Thomas U. Walter (with whom he founded the American Institute of Architects). Davis's book, Rural Residences ..., and his contributions to Downing's books and to Downing's monthly journal, The Horticulturist, gave Davis's designs for country houses wide exposure and broadened their influence. In the 1840s and 1850s, at the height of his career, Davis was busy designing residences in Northeastern cities, towns, countryside and important early suburbs such as Llewellyn Park in New Jersey. Although Davis is arguably best known for this work, his practice also included residences and institutional commissions outside of the Northeast, including the capitol of North Carolina (with Town), an insane asylum at Raleigh, NC, and buildings for the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Davidson College and the Virginia Military Institute. Davis continued practicing architecture until his mid-seventies and then lived in retirement in New Jersey to his death in 1892.

Scope and Content Note

Materials related to Alexander Jackson Davis include two letterbooks, original rendered prints for Rural Residences, architectural drawings and sketches, financial records and 20th century photographs. Garvan also donated a small amount of material related to his other interests, including one architectural drawing by Frank Lloyd Wright published in a September 26, 1938 issue of Life Magazine as "House for a Family of $5,000-6,000 Income." The collection contains correspondence of Anthony Garvan related to the acquisition of materials in the collection, but no materials related to his teaching, publications or personal life. Garvan's personal and professional papers can be consulted at the University of Pennsylvania Archives: Garvan, Anthony N.B. Papers, 1944-1984.

The two Davis letterbooks contain original correspondence received, and a small number of copies of correspondence sent. Notable correspondents include: Andrew Jackson Downing, Ball Hughes, Richard Lathers, Louise Davezac Livingston, J. M. Morehead, Samuel F. B. Morse, John Cox Stevens, David L. Swain and Thomas U. Walter. Other notable correspondents are represented by brief or institutional correspondence, including: Asher Benjamin, James H. Dakin, Richard Morris Hunt, Minard Lafever, Ithiel Town and Richard Upjohn.

Projects represented by significant correspondence and/or drawings include several residences as well as institutional projects such as: North Carolina State Hospital for the Insane, Pauper Lunatic Asylum (Blackwell's Island, New York City), University of North Carolina, Virginia Military Institute and Yale College Alumni Hall. Correspondence in the collection indicates the existence of at least ten projects not identified in the job list by Jane B. Davies, published in 1992 as a chapter, "Works and Projects," in Amelia Peck, ed., Alexander Jackson Davis, American Architect 1803-1892. Additional projects from the period of his partnership with Town and Dakin may be newly identified from financial records in this collection. Some of Davis's built works are documented with twentieth-century, 8" x 10" black-and-white photographs by Wayne Andrews. The collection includes a small number of project-related architectural drawings, including original drawings for the Thomas Hunt Residence and lithographs of plans for the Pauper Lunatic Asylum.

The collection contains substantial materials related to Davis's 1837 publication Rural Residences. Davis continued to revise and enlarge this publication later in his life, altering and painting the prints, adding others not published in the 1837 book and assembling enlarged sets, perhaps in hope of publishing a new edition. In addition to forty-four such prints, thirty-three of them rendered, the collection contains paper folders inscribed with lists, possibly used by Davis to store prints to be assembled into sets. Other materials include a draft of a preface and a set of specifications.

Personal materials of Alexander Jackson Davis include travel sketches, engravings unrelated to his architectural projects, notes and a small number of letters from family members. There is no material related to Davis's wife or children.

In preparing this finding aid, staff of the Architectural Archives have relied heavily on: Peck, Amelia, ed. Alexander Jackson Davis, American Architect 1803-1892. New York: Rizzoli, 1992.

Note: Most of the names in this finding aid have been identified by Archives staff from signatures in correspondence, and spelling may be inaccurate. A significant attempt has been made to compare them with published materials to correct spelling and to find full names and life dates. Names found in the Library of Congress Name Authority File are marked with an asterisk. All other names and life dates in this finding aid are deemed reliable but should not be considered authoritative. In process of identifying correspondents and related Davis projects, Archives staff made brief notes of the contents of many (but not all) letters and also made notes of related biographical and historical information from other sources. These notes are not documented and may contain errors, but they may be of some limited use to researchers. See Appendix B: Davis Correspondence Index.
