Biographical Sketch

William Macy Stanton (1888-1969) was born in Ohio. He received both bachelor's and master's degrees in architecture from the University of Pennsylvania in 1912 and 1914 and was awarded 2nd place in the 1916 Rome Prize Competition. After four years of teaching architecture at the University of Illinois, he returned to Philadelphia in 1921 and established an independent practice. He was widely regarded for his hotel designs as well as for his restoration of Quaker Meeting houses.¹ In 1934 William Macy Stanton was appointed architect of, and later project manager for the Cumberland Homesteads, a government housing project for miners.

Scope and Content Note

The collection documents architectural works designed by William Macy Stanton between 1925 and 1936. Of the twenty-eight buildings and projects represented in the collection, the majority are multi-storied hotel or apartment buildings, many located in Atlantic City, New Jersey (e.g., The Lafayette and James Madison Hotels). In addition, drawings in the collection document Stanton's work for Cumberland Homesteads, a New Deal housing project for miners under the auspices of the Tennessee Valley Authority. The collection contains no records of his extensive work in the restoration of Quaker Meeting houses. No office files, photographs, or personal documents are found in the Architectural Archives, nor are any known to exist.

The collection is arranged in one series, chronologically, by job number. A full index to projects represented in this collection is found in Appendix A.
